EASTERN HOTEL,

CAUSEWAY STREET, BOSTON,

THIS Hotel has been finished and furnished in a superior style by the proprietor, and is conducted upon the European plan. The upper stories are occupied for sleeping apartments, and are splendidly furnished with all the modern improvements.

The Hotel is finely located for the accommodation of business men, and they will find it a convenient, comfortable, and economical place to stop at. Those who like the European plan of having meals when they want, and paying for just what they have, should give this place a call, where they will receive careful attention, and be made comfortable. THE EATON HOUSE,
Main Street, Bangor, Maine.

This House has been thoroughly repaired, refitted, and refurnished throughout with New Carpets, Furniture, Beds and Bedding, and is now open for the free use of company, under the charge of the subscriber.

It is a large, commodious, and well furnished House, situated on Main Street, near the centre of the city, and within a short distance of the Steamboat Wharves and the Depot of the E. & K. Railroad, to and from which Coaches are always in readiness to convey passengers.

Its numerous advantages to strangers, and particularly to those visiting the city on business or for pleasure, renders it one of the most desirable Houses in the city.

Connected with the House is a large and commodious Stable, in charge of competent and faithful hostlers.

By strict personal attention to the comfort of his guests, the proprietor hopes to receive a liberal share of patronage.

Professor Humphrey's SPECIFIC

Homœopathic Medicines,

FOR

Families, Travelers, and others.

THESE Medicines have been tried, approved, and in use for supplying forty-two years, with unique remedies against all the more common diseases which occur in every day life. And in all cases they are only remedies or cures, but more common diseases, such as Colds, Headaches, Rheumatism of the Stomach, Fever, Worm Complaints, Hives, &c., &c., but also those more hidden and fixed diseases which have gained a foothold on the constitution, such as Gumms, Cholera, Dysentery, Inflammation, &c., for these treatment is so very simple, that always to use the proper remedies on hand. There are also remedies for those more delicate female diseases which hardly find it proper to name out, but yet a freedom from which contributes so much to the happiness and enjoyment of life.

These Medicines are prepared in the form of large Sugar Pellets, each of which is sufficiently for the largest dose, and put up in cases properly labelled. Each case contains 30 or 40 vials, each 16 boxes for the different kinds, and enclosed in a case, accompanied with a Manual or Book of Directions, giving a concise description of the diseases treated, and directions for giving the medicines, that is necessary for use. Cases also containing from one to five small cases are put up, which may be supplied with any of the different kinds at the option of the purchaser.

The advantages of Specific Homœopathic Medicines—in prescribing a new Homœopathic Medicine at a single dose—will be recommended for a couple of headache, sleeplessness, fever, and ague cure, study, and discrimination is required and not left to the patient.

Directions have been given a Specific Remedy for each particular disease, and where able to call them with a visit, are persons with out the disease and the which the diseases must be such a remedy to be used, and without that research and examination which, to the mother cures, is needed, and perplexing, annoying, and unsatisfactory. This advantage is very obvious to communicate them to

WHALEBONE SKIRTS.

THE only object of all Whalebone Skirts is to give proper, graceful and elegant form to a lady's dress. Unless this is accomplished, the article is entirely worthless. The Skirts, by forming in the most desirable article, and they their Reputation and Success Stands mostly the unanimous approbation of the ladies. They are light, pliable, and easily adjusted, and the only Skirt which is equally adapted to the parlor, the street and the crowd, the grade in one degree or another, and in our opinion and in the opinion of thousands of others who have bought them, the most desirable goods of the kind in the market. We were the first to introduce the Skirts to the South, and from our experience in the manufacture and sale of these goods, we can confidently say that all kinds of whalebone, and nearly all kinds of spring steel, are unsuitable and unsatisfactory, as they will not bend over the ridges when pressed out of shape. We consider it an worthless, of whatever material made or in any place it is manufactured, and cautions the public against purchasing such articles, and at the same time yielding a full public to keep the Press in proper shape before the ladies. To accomplish this we have our card made in our own creation, and expressly for our goods, and from the experimental that can be made, that will retain its proper shape when pressed out of shape, and are at present in manufacturing the finest, we will not roll a curl when put and warranted to wash without injury. The publicare cautioned against all worthless goods as the market since our goods have become popular and extensively known, has been flooded with goods of all kinds, and put together with cord form or [illegible], or any other objectionable kind of course are called Whalebone Skirts. Some authorities in their efforts to profit by our reputation, have gone so far as to keeps almost exactly our name upon their goods.

Coming and Coming.

Pool; Or, Woman's Heroism.

An Incident of the war of 1812.

In the war with England I was, as you know, a very little girl. I was old enough however, to remember distinctly the preparations made at one time at our house for a night attack.

The supper things were removed, and the table stood brown loaves, their tops nicely glistening smooth with Peggy's wet hands, the smoking pot of pork and beans, the latter white loaves rising against as they could, a cake of gingerbread, and turnovers for each [illegible].

[illegible] all night, and nervous with a strange trouble in the morning.

The logs in the large kitchen fire-place burned brightly, the great oven was all a-glow, and mother, who was superintending, said a many needles to burn to embers, which it was fast approaching, to be ready for the first [illegible] of pork, cake, baking.

Just to the door on the left of the fireplace [illegible], and Pool entered. He was an Indian of notoriously bad character, but had always behaved himself with propriety while [illegible] visits in our house. It was so much a matter of course for an Indian to come in without ceremony, that by the time he was fairly disappointing the supper Peggy placed before him, we had almost forgotten his presence.

Pool finished his repast, and then came and sitting with his back to the fire. Physically he was a noble specimen of humanity—more than six feet high, and in figure between Hercules and Apollo. His wore a black serape cap, turned up an inch or so in front, a flap fell upon his neck behind. On the two [illegible] and pants [illegible], somewhat like the mitre of a bishop; it was covered with heavy embroidery of beads, gaily dyed porcupine quills and moose hair, wrought with a regular skill and neatness.

His tightly [illegible] was embroidered in a border an inch deep, with white beads, and fastened at the belt with an engraved [illegible] or polished silver, as large as a breakfast plate. In his open breast appeared a shirt or shirt of large figured and gay colors, the huge [illegible] were fastened with brooches of [illegible] silver, from the size of a dollar to that of a saucer.

Below his short cloth appeared copper colored [illegible] of pale red finest workmanship; still lower, leggings of broadcloth sewed to [illegible] moccasins, the shape outside the seam being very richly embroidered to match the cap.

Beautiful soft moccasins, of embroidered buck, encased his handsome feet. Around his waist was wrapped two or three times a wampum sash in a rhomboidal pattern of black and white shell beads, from this depended two undressed skins of the musk-rat, I think, from the scent. One contained a knife, the other money and some tobacco.

There was nothing like foliage, or indeed the thickets of anything in heaven or earth, or under the earth, so far as I am acquainted, in the patterns, or those of his tribe, with which I was twenty years familiar. Their designs were grotesque, geometrical figures, always symmetrical, and often quite beautiful.

There he stood in the red fire-light, huge, brawny, exotic, [illegible] balanced on his pretty moccasins, with face a little interested, and the look altogether of a sleek panther, ready for a spring.

He surveyed us a while in silence, and then he said: "Me stay here a night."

"Me keep here," pointing to the kitchen floor.

"No, Pool," said mother kindly, "we cannot keep you."

He repented, with fierce authority, "Me stay here to night."

Mother knew, by sad experience, the consequence of benevolence to the copper colored vagabonds. She knew that after we were asleep, Pool, if he remained, would open the door to some of his brethren, who were always lounging about the stores, and quickly more or less intoxicated. They would fight, make night hideous with their grunts, yells and curses; twisting their hands into the unshorn locks of hair upon each others heads, they would crack their vertebræ with a noise that could be heard some distance, a horrible, hideous performance. Sometimes during the [illegible] years, as in those of our story, Rock, had often been dismayed by the [illegible] scuffles of these screeching serenaders, while people within were passing a wretched night. She well knew the danger of offending them, and arousing their revenge.

While deciding upon her course, mother was stirring the hot embers, and drawing them to the mouth of the oven with the long toothed iron shovel. Pool stood at her left hand nearly half way from the oven to the door where he had entered, and which remained open. His face was turned towards her as if waiting an answer.

Her decision being made, she said firmly: "Pool, I cannot, and will not let you stay here to-night."

Instantly he bared his knife. It glittered, but not so terribly as the wicked green light that shot out from in under the enraged brow of its owner.

"If you will this," he growled. "I would ask you for a ninepence."

The instant the knife flashed in the fire light mother, with a dexterous movement, drew it and red hot shovel, full of glowing coals, and without moving a step suddenly called out—

"If you run, Pool, or I will put coals in your bosom! I will burn you to death!"

He hesitated and stepped back. She followed. He could not touch the shovel without being burned. It was useless to dodge, for he had watched from infancy the lithe, swaying form before him; slender and graceful, but tough as a white oak sapling—his equal in agility, and in strength. He knew the power and passion in that light form, which now made her cheeks crimson, and made her eyes glow and sparkle almost like the burning coals before him.

He wavered a moment, and then sprang into the entry. In the same instant the shovel and its contents flew into the fire-place, and mother, leaning against the door, was sliding the savage at bay alone, pressing down the latch with both hands. Peggy with quick wit, caught a fork from the table, and rushed to lower the latch. Mother held it while Peggy placed her stout shoulder against the door.

The Indian turned, grunted and swore fearfully, but the door was true to its trust.

Silence reigned within. Fanny was asleep in the cradle; Annie, too frightened to cry, and I, with eyes wide open, was watching to see how it would end.

Mother whispered to Peggy:

"What if they break in?" As she spoke Pool slid out of doors by a window that was fastened. Mother had been hoping for Lize, and drawing the fork, she darted into the entry and bolted the out side door. Her candle was barely secured, when black, and Lize Indian, desperately furious at finding herself

Mother returned to the kitchen, and poured a pail of water on the fire. Peggy at the same time blew out the lamp and bolted the oven door. The darkness of the room enabled us to see the great black Pool at the window, making frightful gestures, and uttering awful imprecations in his broken language.

Meanwhile mother, aware that an Indian and his gun were never far separated, took us noiselessly into the parlor, and seated us on the floor beneath the only window looking upon the street. Straightening our limbs, she placed the candle over us, and whispered, "Now sit still as mice. If Pool should fire into this window, the bullets will go over your heads and strike the ceiling—he cannot hurt you here."

Young as I was, I knew from mother's manner that our troubles were not yet ended.

Our house was situated upon a hill side.—The kitchen and its entrance upon the ground, though ready in the second story, having a basement beneath. The large window, where we were sitting, was inaccessible, while in the kitchen there was no escape from Pool's observation.

Full of a place of business was several rods in front of ours, and this light sent its rays across the yard, partially illuminating the garden. By this I could see mother with clasped hands, and pale as marble, and nearly fainting from the window.

Directly she clasped her hands, saying: "He is safe! Oh, children, your father is safe, and so is!" I thought Pool would go and murder him! I could see him sitting there so calmly posting his books," while Pool went straight towards him. I cannot think what saved him. Pool went past up the hill towards Blanc's. Oh, Peggy, I might have run off and given my friend warning, but I know Pool too well. He would have returned and butchered you all. It was a dreadful choice to make, but I would not sacrifice so many lives for one, though that one is the dearest to me." She sat down by the door, leaned her head upon the cradle, and cried bitterly.

Peggy now relighted up, rekindled the fires, and made mother comfortable. She was preparing to put Annie and me to bed, when father, much agitated, came in to tell us that Pool had just killed Blane at the hotel. He had gone there intending to pass the night. He was much excited and very insolent. Mr. Blane ordered him to leave the house. Pool refused, and he struck him a light blow with a stick. Strange that Mr. Blane should do so, who knew so well that an Indian will not bear a blow—that Pool, least of all would not brook such an indignity. Pool retreated out of the door, Mr. Blane followed him. Seeing the savage stooped to save the premises he attempted to restrain. Pool knew last night knife and shot down in the landlord's Blane's back. The wounded man staggered, and groaned out: "Oh Sarah I'm a dead man. Draw out the knife." With terror and despair she obeyed; her husband fell dead at her feet.

Pool was apprehended, and escorted by a young guard to the old first. After his trial he was imprisoned there to wait his execution. Before the day arrived the British captured the fort, and under pretence of exchanging prisoners, they got Poole in their possession.

We never will feel again. What finally became of him we do not know. Arbuta.

National Republican Nominations.

FOR PRESIDENT,

JOHN C. FREMONT,

OF CALIFORNIA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

WILLIAM L. DAYTON,

OF NEW JERSEY.

FOR GOVERNOR,

HANNIBAL HAMLIN.

The Buchanan Laying Assessments.

We learn that orders have been issued by leaders of the short democracy in this State to the Postmasters and other holders of office under the national administration, for them to assist in their assessment for the purpose of effecting an organization and carrying on the political campaign. These office-holders will generally consent to be bled of their money, in order to hold their places. The Republicans have no such rocks of raising a tax, but they should oppose their honest and earnest efforts in behalf of political freedom, against the money power of the office-holders. Let the young men work, and let the old men be patient. Let the Republicans work for their principles and the success of their cause, above and beyond what the money of office-holders can accomplish. Let the Republicans everywhere organize and prepare and circulate documents and read tracts and papers. Let the light of truth be spread, and no man left in voluntary darkness, and under the delusions of the paid runners of the slave power. If the office-holders submit to pay assessments it only goes into the hands of leaders who have sold themselves to the slave power, them let the people tax themselves and work with double energy.

It is poor policy for the national office-holders in Maine to pay political party assessments now, for they must know, that even in the event of the success of Buchanan, they must walk the plank. They were denounced at the Cincinnati Convention as shoeless pets, and it is well known that Mr. Buchanan, if he has a chance, will sweep them all out to make room for his friends par excellence in Maine.

Justifying the outrage on Sumner.

The Atlas says that some of the Democratic stump-speakers are growing bolder than their newspapers. At a Buchanan ratification meeting in Jackson, Michigan, a certain C. C. Chatfield denounced Mr. Sumner as a black guard and closed a long tirade by saying that Brooks gave Sumner what he deserved, perhaps a little more than he (Chatfield) thought it was about right. This brutal remark was applauded by a considerable portion of the Democratic present, and gets of course) shared with them the Republicans.

Shipley said the same thing at the Democratic State Convention in this city.

A correspondent of the N. Y. Evening Post, writing from Milwaukie, says that three Democratic papers have recently come out for Fremont in Wisconsin, and several more influential gentlemen have declared their intention to follow suit, so that the wake of the locofocos is getting longer. The German element is fairly aroused for Fremont, and will make itself felt at the polls. At an auction sale on the 4th, largely attended by foreigners, about five hundred of whom were present, a vote was proposed and taken for President. The result indicated a vote in favor of Fremont. Several such votes have been taken on different occasions, and the result was uniformly been the same—a general preference for Fremont.

It is stated at Washington that Mr. Mason has requested to be recalled from Paris. This is an act of thoughtfulness by which the expiring administration intends to reward an few friends. Mr. Cushing may find it convenient to take this place as Minister to France, and thus help make up a fortune which have been damaged in the last shoulder which have been turned upon Frank Pierce.

A brief conversation occurred recently in this city between a democrat from this country, and a democrat residing in the city, which briefly as follows:

"Well, Mr. J. you and I have been Democrats a good while, and I want to ask you what you think about the repeal of the Missouri Compromise—the extension of slavery—the attack on Senator Sumner—the dispersion of the Legislature in Kansas,—how can these matters be defended as democratic, and christian, and right?"

"If you want to talk with me on the subject of morals and religion and conscience in connection with politics, I shall have no conversation with you. The subjects have no connection."

President Pierce, in a recent speech, spoke of the nomination of Mr. Buchanan:

"I congratulate you the youthful hope has fallen upon a man who stands on the 'JEFFERSONIAN PLATFORM THAT LOCOFOCO,' and that he will take the SAME with the standard lowered never an inch!"

Stephen Arnold Douglas in his late New York speech said:

"Buchanan and myself have stood years back, ever since I came into public life, HELD THE SAME POSITION on the slavery question from beginning to end."

Now hear what Buchanan says:

"I have been pleased to see PLATFORM OF WHICH I HEARTILY APPROVE, and I regret as much as any one by the platform."

After reading the above, we do not really understand how an opponent of Pierce and Douglas can vote for Buchanan. Perhaps such a vote might be explained, but what man may pride of honor or consistency known to human man.

Secret Movement of the Slave Power.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald gives the following account of a plot, by which the slave power of the country hope to retain their hold upon the political power of the Union, to be employed for their own purposes:

"A very curious and important secret movement is on foot here in behalf of the Southern democracy, being no less than a conspiracy of the original friends of Pierce, Douglas and Dodge in the South and Southwest, to throw the Presidential contest as to throw the election into the House of Representatives, through a few votes from three or four Southern States, so as to Fillmore, the great object being the defeat of Buchanan and the election of Breckinridge to the White House.

It is supposed that by thus carrying up Fillmore, Buchanan and Fillmore to this House, the old game of the election of Speaker will be played between the three parties, each party to make its personal explanations, Lincoln men voting for and Buchanan voting, the whole session, from December to the 4th of March, will be exhausted. If by that time there is no election by the House, the Constitution of the United States declares that the person elected as Vice President shall be President, as in the case of death or constitutional inability of the President. And if there be no Vice President elected by the people, through the majority of the votes of the electoral college, then the Senate shall choose the Vice President from the two highest on the list of names for the people. (See amendments to Constitution.)

The calculation, then, is first to throw the election into the House—second, to utterly break up this session without coming to a choice, and then, by throwing the issue upon the Senate, to secure the election of Breckinridge as President of the United States. In the latter contingency he would be the inevitable result, whatever Breckinridge should come before them with a clear majority of the electoral vote or the highest on the lowest of the two candidates named in.

To make sure, however, of the requisite vote for Breckinridge, some of the leading South Americans have been let into the plot, and it is arranged that Mr. Humphrey Marshall, of Ky., and Mr. Hoyt, of N. C., and others shall take the stump in Kentucky, South Carolina and other States, for Fillmore and Breckinridge, a division of both votes confidently expected, and given out that the Union States of the South to Breckinridge.

Four will see the work up of the plot when they start the mischief."

If you announce that Fremont is "a traitor" they can point to the fact that he was elected by the votes of the Democratic party in California. If the Republicans have taken candidates one man from New Jersey, and one from the South in California, who was born in Savannah, reared in South Carolina, and is a slaveholder to boot, they cannot be very sectional.

The Richmond Enquirer is anxious to have Whig support for Buchanan; but says it wants no Whig to come over to him unless he is ready to acquire his ancient faith and profess allegiance to our peculiar platform.

Col. Fremont at the South. Many of the southern papers, while discussing Col. Fremont, of being a traitor to southern interests, cannot forbear paying to him a tribute of praise for his services to the country. The Columbia South Carolinian says:

"In order that his talents were matured by gentle hands—in approaching manhood he was guarded by generous and patriotic men—as the development of his genius South Carolina encouraged him by her support, and presented him with a sword, a token of her appreciation of his and her kind wish of success to his arms. Loyalty and fierce of character he has exhibited in his daring efforts to build to the arches of his country.

At Fremont and Dayton electoral ticket has been made up in Kentucky, with Cassius M. Clay at the head.

The Baltimore Patriot, an old and staunch Southern journal, thus speculates upon the prospects of Buchanan in Pennsylvania:

"If the prospect of carrying Pennsylvania for Mr. Buchanan, was doubtful from the beginning, its chances have become still more desperate by the transfer of the Germans vote to Fremont. The Philadelphia Times, a paper of large circulation, cautions its renewals and discontinuances, and it is arranged that Mr. Humphrey Marshall, of Ky., and Mr. Hoyt, of N. C., and others shall take the stump in Kentucky, South Carolina and other States, for Fillmore and Breckinridge, a division of both votes confidently expected, and given out that the Union States of the South to Breckinridge.

Four will see the work up of the plot when they start the mischief."

If you announce that Fremont is a traitor—deny can you do if the same time page

5th and 20th of each Month.

Reduced Prices. 100 lbs. Baggage Free.

The new Packet, including transit of the Isthmus, 180 Pounds.

By order of the Postmaster General, the United States Mail Steamship Illinois will sail from New York on the 5th and 20th of each month.

Passengers are landed at the Railroad Depot at Aspinwall, and conveyed across to the Pacific Steamer on the Company's own Railroad. This is the only line giving entire Through Tickets, including meals, on the Isthmus.

Passengers made in four hours, instead of two days, thus avoiding the great exposure by night in open boats to fever and ague, and 40 miles of dangerous lake and river navigation, over rocks and shoals.

Arrangements have now been completed so that the regular U. S. Pacific Mail Steamer will arrive at Panama, for this Steamship connecting on arrival of the Atlantic Mails and passengers, thus saving a passage, and by the Mail Route and shortest passage, without any detention on the Isthmus.

Passengers are strongly cautioned against the Companies running from New York, and purchasing Tickets of Runners, and Tickets thus sold can be obtained of the only authorized Agent for the Atlantic and Pacific Mail Steamship Companies, in this city. C. J. HARTLEY, Agent.
